Al. Herford Says He Will Write a Book Entitled "The Trials of a Manager."

Buffalo, June 6.—"When I get through with prize fighting and prize fighters," said Al Herford, the Baltimore sporting man, yesterday.

"No place is my home. I am unmarried, and a thousand dollars now and then does not set me out of my mind, as some people imagine.

"I laughed at first, but then it made me sore. I telegraphed back to McCarthy these words: I will let Gans fight O'Brien for 65 per cent. of the gross receipts.

"This brings up another funny thing. Four years ago the management of the Eastern (Md.) Fair wrote me asking me what I would take to bring Gans there to fight some man, and me to name the man and bring him with me.

A GOOD RACING STORY. Irishman Bet His Week's Wages and Lost, and Then Asked the Jockey What Delayed Him.

An hotel clerk told the following racing story about an Irishman, who bet his week's wages on a race.

"The old fellow went out to the track to make a killing," continued the clerk. "He had been tipped off in great style to play one of the horses, and had promised to bring Bridget enough money home to buy a whole set of spring bonnets and clothes galore.

"Well, to make a long story short, the race was quickly run, and Pat's sure thing pulled in last, about three minutes behind the flyers in front. Pat saw the horse go by the stand; his colors trailing. His hopes had gone up in the air.
