Red Rose Tea Uniformity

A TEA that is good to-day and poor to-morrow is unreliable. Have you ever noticed variations in the quality of the tea you use?

A lack of expert knowledge by the tasters and blenders of that tea produced that result. There was a failure at a vital point, an ignorance of combining qualities in teas, poor judgment in the blending of that maker's teas, a weakness which invariably gives just such results as your poor tea.

Every chest of Red Rose Tea is tested at the gardens, again by the Eastern Red Rose shippers, then at the Red Rose warehouse upon its arrival before blending; after that an experimental blend is tested, and the final or actual blend is also tested before being packed.

Nothing is left to chance. That is why that "rich fruity flavor" is always present in Red Rose Tea.

Why Red Rose Tea is always uniform, why

The Best Policy

BY ELLIOTT FLOWER. Author of the Spillman, Policeman Flynn, etc., etc.

An insurance company is merciless in following up evidence of attempted fraud, but, lacking such evidence, it is wise to conduct investigations with extreme delicacy.

In this instance, the ordinary practice would have been accepted without question were it not for the mystery of the "heart trouble" that was supposed not to exist.

"It doesn't understand it," said the doctor gloomily. "I wish we could demand an autopsy."

"Before dismissing the matters from his mind, Murray revealed the facts carefully. There had been an application to another company from a man living at 1176 Wabash avenue, which had been refused because of heart trouble, but the city directory told him that the man was at that address. It did give an Elmer Harkness at another address, however, which coincided with the story told by the doctor.

"Somebody," mused Murray, "must have been trying to beat the other company. That's the best I can make out of it, although I can't see why he should have done this Elmer's name and antecedents. It's a most extraordinary case."

The latest city directory gave Elmer Harkness living at 2313 Wesson street, which was the address at that address at the time the directory was issued. So much Murray had looked up before. Now, further to satisfy himself, he went through all the directories for the interval of the two years, and he was rewarded by finding the name of Elmer Harkness twice in one of them.

"No weapons," replied Harkness. "I'm not that kind."

"I don't see," said Murray, "why you waited here to be arrested."

"Why, I had a little interest in that insurance," explained Harkness, "and I rather wanted to get it before leaving. However, waiting here was a little trying on the nerves, even if everything did seem to be going all right, and I was just about to slip up to Milwaukee until the case was settled. I ought to have gone the day Elmer was stricken."

"What Elmer?" demanded Murray. "Elmer Harkness, my cousin," the other replied promptly.

"I'm Elmer Harkness, his cousin," he returned with equal promptness. "Which of you was born at Madison, Indiana?" inquired Murray.

"He was replied Harkness, and added, "I was born at Matteson, Illinois."

"There's a nice pair of names for a couple," commented Murray as the possibilities of the situation began to dawn on him.

"No trouble at all," returned Harkness.

"I thought you were dead," said Murray.

"I wish I was," said Harkness. He had almost fainted at the first sight of Murray, but had recovered himself quickly, and, having once decided that the case was hopeless, he recalled himself to the inevitable and spoke with a frank carelessness that had been entirely lacking when he was playing a part and trying to stick to the details of a prepared story.
